IMPELLED BY HYPNOTISM

The Late Commodore Mayo's Wife Makes a Statement.

She Says Occult Power on the Part of Her Divorced Husband Prevailed Upon Her to Marry a Man Who Was Over a Third of a Century Her Senior—Her Recent Life.

NEW YORK, April 12.—A Waterbury, Conn., dispatch, published here this morning, says:

A secret supposed to have died with Commodore William K. Mayo was revealed this evening by Miss Jennie Elton Stevens, who asserts that she was hypnotized into marrying the commodore, who, in 1892, at the age of sixty-two years, won her for his second wife. They separated on the evening of their wedding reception and never saw each other afterward.

The young wife was taken to a private asylum, and for two years her reason tottered. The commodore obtained a divorce from her in a South Dakota court, and afterward married a Mrs. Hall, his housekeeper. Concerning the estrangement between Commodore Mayo and his second wife Washington society and the world at large has been curious all these years. Miss Stevens, for she resumed her maiden name, has never since her release from the asylum been living here. Her health has been restored, and she has taken a deep interest in the work of the church, and has sought in every way possible to divert her mind from dwelling on unpleasant memories.

She believes that Commodore Mayo had the power. She had heard that he had somewhere in his travels in the far East, from a Yogi or from a Brahmin, learned the secret of exercising a strange and irresistible fascination over his fellow-men. She and her parents were traveling in the White Mountains in 1891 when she first met the commodore.

"I was struck by his power," she said last evening. "The eyes seemed to possess some strange power," she said last evening. "They were great blue, fearless eyes, that seemed to draw one to them. I never could understand whence came that influence which completely took me captive."

Miss Stevens had never dreamed of marrying the commodore. She was only twenty-two years old. She feared him and loved him by turns. When she was away from him his influence over her waned, but in his presence she was powerless.

He actually commanded her to marry him, she says, and she obeyed. Three times before the marriage ceremony she declared to him that their engagement was broken. He paid no more attention to her than he would to the expression of a child's whim.

Only a few days before their marriage she told him that she dreaded that he had some strange influence over her, and said that she feared he would make her subject to his caprice and will. He told her that he only loved her and that her fears were groundless.

Then there was the wedding, with its bridesmaids and roses and jubilation of guests, and the drive to the railroad station in a shower of rice. It all seemed to her a confused dream. She could not understand why she had married the old commodore, and she now attributes the whole affair to hypnotism.

Miss Stevens says that she did not leave the commodore of her own free will, but that he drove her from him. She alleges that he seemed to tire of her and treat her cruelly. They went to New York on their wedding journey and then to Washington, where the wedding reception was held.

The young wife was disinclined to receive the guests and vainly begged to be excused. Commodore Mayo commanded her to descend the staircase to the parlor and she did. She became ill and according to her story, the commodore grew tired of her, and sent for her father to take her home.

Miss Stevens avers that she would gladly have returned to her husband after her release from the sanitarium, where she was placed by her father, but that her parents would not permit her to do so. She claims to have begun her divorce against the commodore, and only last week the case was decided against her. Persons in Waterbury who knew Miss Stevens at the time of her marriage say they could not then understand the strange influence which the commodore seemed to have over the young woman. Her family is socially prominent here.

FIRE AT BOWLING GREEN.

Flames Nearly Destroy the Old County Seat.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., April 12.—The town of Bowling Green, the county seat of Caroline county, was nearly swept away by a conflagration. The fire was caused by a coal oil lamp overturning in the store of George C. Swain. It commenced at 10 o'clock and raged until morning. Before the flames could be subdued thirty-two houses were destroyed, among them a number of stores with valuable stocks of goods. The loss is estimated at $50,000; insurance about $3,000. The principal losers were Elliott & Barlow's carriage works, $6,000; Mrs. H. F. Samuels, $3,000; Joel Haine, $5,000; T. D. Cowhill, $145 (no insurance on any of the above); county jail and other county buildings, $1,200; no insurance; R. D. Vincent, $5,000, insurance $2,100; G. D. Dancy, $2,000, insurance $1,000; Mrs. Maggie Dorsey, $2,000, insurance $1,000, and many other smaller losses. One of the severest losses is that of Mrs. H. F. Samuels' storehouse, dwelling, stock of goods, and furniture. Mrs. Samuels' case is most distressing. She is ill and not expected to recover. Mr. Samuels is nearly blind, their daughter is a paralytic, and a sister of Mrs. Samuels is insane. They lose everything and are homeless and destitute.

SHIPMENTS OF MASSE.

A Royal Order About its Importation Into the Netherlands.

Under date of February 27, 1900, Minister of the Netherlands to the Hague gave a royal order relating to the importation of masse, and declaring that the same, in pieces not exceeding fifty grams in weight and when destined for the purpose of strengthening yarns, may be admitted free of import duties. In the provisions against abuse of the privilege, it is decreed that the manufacturer shall make special application to the Minister of Finance, who shall determine the quantity to be admitted per annum; removal to the factory shall be effected under seal. The Government officials supervising the mixture of the masse with other material immediately on its arrival at the factory.

Spring Fever

During the winter, extra work is thrown upon the various organs of the body.

Spring makes this manifest. The appetite becomes poor, sleep restless, bowels constipated; sometimes there is dyspepsia, liver or kidney troubles. Life seems not worth living. This is the time to take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is better than any other spring tonic in the world. It refreshes, strengthens, rebuilds. A PRIVATE REVENUE STAMP covers the neck of the bottle.

HISTORIC CHURCH BURNS

A Birthplace of American Liberty Destroyed by Fire.

First Church in Concord, Where the Massachusetts Provincial Congress Met in 1775, a Total Wreck. Last Sounding of the Bell Announced the Doom of the Edifice.

BOSTON, April 12.—The historic First Church in Concord, where the Massachusetts Provincial Congress met in the spring of 1775, and caught fire and burned to the ground shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. The blaze was caused by an overheated furnace, and when discovered the whole structure was in flames. At 2:30 o'clock the steeple fell and the fire department turned its efforts toward saving the Wright Tavern and surrounding dwelling houses, two or three of which caught fire from the showers of sparks flying from the blazing church.

The families in the dwelling houses nearby were compelled to make a hasty exit. The entire town was aroused and hundreds of people gathered about the burning building.

At 2:40 o'clock the tower bell fell in with a great crash. The roof also went and the fire reached almost every part of the building. The parsonage was the last place to catch fire, and before they were burning several chimneys rushed in and brought out many of the valuable pictures.

W. T. Farrer, a local undertaker, discovered the fire and even though the bell was burning he rushed in and rang the old bell, which is the town fire alarm. When the bell fell into the ruins, it made a tremendous crash among the burning timbers and sent showers of sparks to the air. Thus the last sounding of the historic bell was to ring the alarm for the burning of the edifice in which it had stood for nearly a century.

The April exercises in honor of the anniversary of the famous day in 1775 when "The Embattled Farmers" of Concord, the handsome house in Vermont Avenue which the Secretary and his daughter moved into during the winter was decorated throughout with Easter lilies and palms. The table was floridly beautiful with lilies and roses. Pink tapers burned under glass shades, the decorations and appointments of the table being of the same dainty color. The additional guests were the German Ambassador, the French Ambassador, the Mexican Ambassador and Mme. Aspiroz, Senator and Mrs. Foraker, Mr. and Mrs. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Westinghouse, Mrs. Barber, Mr. Cockrell, and Representative Cousins.

Representative Cousins and Mrs. Dalzell were the host and hostess at a beautifully appointed dinner last night, when their guests of honor were the Postmaster General and Mrs. Charles Emory Smith. In attendance were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Hill, Senator and Mrs. Elkins, the Chinese Minister and Mrs. Wu, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. McKee, Senator and Mrs. Lovings, Mrs. J. Dorman Steele, Mrs. Stanley Matthews, Miss Westcott, General Corbin, Senator Keen, and Representative Wadsworth. The table was beautifully decorated with meteor roses and the candles glowed under ruby red shades.

THE CIRCUS-LIT QUESTION.

Amendment to Police Rules Adopted by the District Commissioners.

The long-considered and much-debated question of granting permits to circuses has now been settled by the adoption of the following amendment to section 14, article 13 of the Police Regulations: "That no circus shall be allowed to be located, operated, or conducted on any lot or open space without the consent of 75 per cent of the residents keeping house in the square on which it is proposed to hold the circus, and on the square confronting said circus ground."

The adoption of the above amendment was recommended to the Commissioners by the Attorney for the District.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Mrs. Hobart and her son Garrett, who have been guests at the White House for the past day or two, will return to Paterson, N. J., today.

Mrs. Champ Clark, of Missouri, held an afternoon reception yesterday, when the guests were invited to meet Mrs. Richard P. Bland. Mrs. Bland came on to Washington to attend the services in memory of her husband, which occurred in Congress a short time ago.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Miss Wilson entertained last night in honor of the British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefoot. The handsome house in Vermont Avenue which the Secretary and his daughter moved into during the winter was decorated throughout with Easter lilies and palms.
